ALEXANDRIA, VIRGINIA. CAPITAL OVER 350,000 DOLLARS, AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING. The Charter of this Company offers more favorable advantages to the farmer and others, than any Company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium eash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves one-eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay; or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the insured saves nearly one-half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to combination of the CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE. This Company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 13th day of March, 1854, since which time over seven thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over seventy thousand dollars have been paid for losses. Having increased our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospects of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe, that, by prudence, caution, and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety not surpassed by any Company in the U. States. All differences in settlement of losses, may be determined by three disinterested arbitrators of the County where such loss happened, to be mutually chosen by the insured and the Company. INCIDENTS OF THE PRINCE'S TOUR. Numerous anecdotes, more or less veracious, connected with the tour of the Prince of Wales in this country, will doubtless be circulated by the press for considerable time to come. There is one which has started on its rounds: "At Albany, on Tuesday, as the Prince of Wales was passing in the procession by the Museum Building, some one pointed out to him the Benicia Boy, who was standing on the steps. The bold John raised his hat respectfully to the kingling, and Albert Edward with equal politeness, touched his in return. The parties respectively 'smiled a smile,' and each went on his way re-

At Albany, also, the Journal says: "Philip Mills, an old veteran of Waterloo. one of the Guards to whom Wellington said on that eventful day, 'Up, Guards, and at them,' was presented to Lord Renfrew and his snite. He showed the Prince' his Waterloo medal, his certificate of honorable discharge from the army for 'extremely good conduct,' and his certificate of ten years' service in the police of London. He also handed the Prince two letters, one from the Colonel of the Grenadier Guards, and one from the Superintendent of the London Police, addressed to the Governor General of Canada .-They were given to Mills in 1835, and the seals have remained unbroken till they were broken this morning by the Prince. They were found to contain the strongest possible commendation of Mills. The Prince and his suite manifested great interest in the veteran. Viscount Hinchenbroke and Mr. Elliot are themselves officers in the Guards at present; the former being in the same battalion in which Mills formerly served. Gen. Bruce took Mill's address, and we trust and believe the veteran will have cause to remember the visit of the Prince with life-long pleas-

At Boston the Prince gave an interview to another old soldier, Ralph Farnham, "the last surviving solider of the battle of Bunker

We take the following account of his interview from the Boston Transcript: . "The Prince shook hands with the old veteran, and said he was extremely glad to see

"The Duke of Newcastle asked Mr. Farnham if he saw General Burgoyne at the time he surrendered? 'O ves,' said Mr. Farnham,' and a brave officer he was too.' 'But you got the best of him there,' said the Duke. Mr. F. said that Burgoyne's supplies were cut off, and they were in a wretched condition. "In speaking to the Prince, Mr. Farnham said, 'I hear so much in praise of the Prince of Wales, that I fear the people will all turn royalists." The remark was received with "The interview lasted about fifteen minutes, and was marked by the most cordial courtesy and good feeling. It was an interesting event to witness an old veteran of the Revolution, 105 years of age, shaking hands with a Prince whose great great great great grandfather was on the throne of England at the time he was born, and whose great great grandfather (George III) he contended against during the Revolution.

"Mr. Farnham said that, in common with all our countrymen, he desired to pay his respects to the Prince, to show that his animosities were forgotten, and he hoped never to be revived. The Prince presented Mr. Farnham with his autograph." Upwards of $2,000 was abstracted from the pockets of different persons who followed the Prince of Wales to West Point. Ladies were the principal sufferers. One lady, residing At the Boston ball, the Prince opened the to reach heaven. The following characball with Mrs. Mayor Lincoln. His next teristic anecdote of John Randolph is a partner was Mrs. Governor Banks.

Among the guests present who received marked attention was Lady Franklin. There were eleven hundred double tickets and five hundred and twenty-five single tickets sold, the receipts deposited amounting to

This circus was ingeniously decorated with arbors and fountains, and it was built to avoid obstructing the circulation of the street, half above and half below the surface of the ground. The royal family were enabled to visit it without inconvenience by the subterranean passage just brought to light. It was intended for a circus, but no equestrian exercises ever took place there, balls, festivals, dinners, gaming-tables, exhibitions, plays were given there until it was burned, the 16th of December, 1799, as some say, by the men who rented it, to avoid pay-

course, instananeous surrender was proposed by some as the most military course in the face of such odds. O'Reilly, at least, for the Irish in the garrison, (two companies, 260 men,) utterly declined to be a party to any such proceeding, and declared that the man who would take upon himself to even announce such a step to his men, would run the peril of his life. The council I can gother was violently distracted on the point of capitulation or no capitulation, but ultimately an express was sent off to Rome, to the minister of war, announcing that it was resolved to defend the town as best they could and that come what might, the Irish companies were resolved to hold the citadel till the courier returned, or blow it into fragments. In the morning the Irish, at dawn, went to mass, and I believe every individual man among them approached Holy Communion. In an hour or two afterwards they were called upon to meet the foe. The Sardinians poured in through two of the chief streets, attempting at first nothing of a cannonade, and evidently confident of carrying the place against such a mere handful of men at the bayonet's point. They reckoned rashly; for hours they were held at bay. Little, of course, could be done in the streets by such a small body against 10,000 or 12,000 men; and, at last, pressed on every point, O'Reilly threw himself into the citadel to make the last stand for life or death; alone I might for leath say-for when the outer gate crashed to, as the last wounded but undaunted defender passed into the quadrangle, there was not a man in all the little band who did not feel that he had taken his stand there to die. They threw themselves upon the walls, and from the tattered loopholes rained the leaden hail with deadly effect upon the besiegers. But those old walls proved miserable defences, and the enemy, after a brief but deadly struggle of the kind, soon, with cries that rent the air, dashed at the old gate. A crash, a roar-a petard blows it into fragments. Then the struggle commenced indeed. In poured the besiegers into the outer yard, which I should mention does not appear to belong to the citadel proper. However, a bloody reception met them there. The Irish had two guns, loaded with grape, planted inside in a position commanding the entrance, and no sooner were the Piedmontese columns seen through the smoke of the gateway than a murderous fire was opened, mowing them down literally like corn before the sickle. Again, again, again the besiegers dashed through the gate; again, again and again a perfect hail of grapeshot from the two pieces in the yard, and the musketry from the citadel walls behind met them from the Irish inside; while shouts that would stir many a heart at home in Ireland, plainly told that the brave fellows felt but too well the honor of Ireland was on the awful stake of the day. It was mid day, and the outer yard was still uncarried, and the citadel itself behind untouched; but all this was not fated to last much longer. The Piedmontese brought un a piece or two themselves and after the first discharge poured en masse through the gate. My informant asserts that of the heroic Irishman who fought those guns inside, not one man escaped. Subsequently O'Reilly and his men, after further desperate resistance. surrendered themselves as prisoners of war. - Correspondence of the Dublin News.

NO COMPLIMENT IN PRAYER .- We have heard some prayers which were designed to affect the hearer, rather than keen rebuke of the practice:

Judge Greenwood, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, has enclosed to the Secretary of the Interior a letter from Mr. Robinson, Superintendent of Indians, giving information of the murder of the Rev. Morris Brangnier, a missionary to the Crow Indians, by a party of Onepapa Sioux. They excuse the atrocity upon the pretense that Gen. Harney had given them the authority to kill any white man whom they should find settled in their country; but the murder was committed in the Crow country, and not in that of the Sioux. Moreover, Gen. Harney's talk with them in 1856 referred to the apprehension of United States deserters, and not to the killing of settlers.

Not long since, a popular clergyman said that any man who offered a patent name, might as well write after it the quack. The fact that a man belongs to one profession is at least prima facie evidence that he has no special skill in
